

Opposite Book Report

I created an example of an engaging and fun non-book report that student could use as a showing of understanding of a book. Instead of having students write or tell the main idea from a story, I would have them implement this opposite book report where they would create a project to tell about the story. This is for upper grades, I designed this activity for third grade. For the language arts part, I would have them write on index cards of the main ideas to have lying next to the project.

